CELEBRATING 105 YEARS OF SERVICE
TOUCHING HEARTS, CHANGING LIVES
ABOUT MATRIX HUMAN SERVICES

Everyday in Detroit, Matrix Human Services is touching hearts and changing lives - fighting poverty at 23 locations with programs designed to educate and empower families, children, men and women. Our Mission? To break the generational cycle of poverty gripping the City of Detroit.

Matrix is committed to the City of Detroit and we promise to continue our march working with everyone who enters our doors, ensuring they have food, clothing, shelter, an education, a job and hope for tomorrow. By implementing our “Transition to Success” (TTS) model into the lives of youth, adults, and families, we offer a real path to independence….not just a hand out but a strong and reliable hand up.

The League of Catholic Women led the way in 1906 – a group of caring women who saw the need and stepped up to help immigrant families who had been forgotten. 105 years later, Matrix continues to fight poverty, heartbreak and hopelessness. Over the years, the name, leadership and address have changed, but our core mission to fight poverty remains unchanged.

Poverty is a disease plaguing our community. Become a part of the solution. One person can make a difference….that person can be you!
Dear Friends & Supporters:

For the past five years, I have had the extreme pleasure of serving as President and CEO of Matrix Human Services, a 501(c)3 non-profit, committed to developing comprehensive systems of care that target generational poverty.

During my tenure, I have focused my efforts on expanding current programming and new program development specific to the needs of residents of the City of Detroit. I have had many proud moments as CEO of Matrix including but not limited to the creation of the “Transition to Success” (TTS) model implemented in the lives of our clients, across all of our program sites, to transition individuals and families from dependency to self-sufficiency through a structured, comprehensive, integrated, scientifically driven system of care that engages an existing, already funded human services delivery system. TTS demonstrates effectiveness through comprehensive structured programs, collaborations, meaningful outcome measures and real client success stories.

Over the past five years, I have worked with amazing board members, staff, volunteers and corporate supporters like Blue Care Network, DTE Energy, Great Lakes Health and The Grosse Pointe Rotary whose 3 million pound challenge to the community for food, clothing and books filled pantry shelves and supported thousands of clients. I experienced the indescribable pleasure of receiving an Emmy as creator and executive producer of WatRUfightn4? a video and website promoting social activism that has engaged tens of thousands to volunteerism. Most importantly, I have witnessed the lives of our clients changing before my very eyes as they transition out of poverty to a life of self-sufficiency which they once thought was impossible to achieve.

My journey so far has been simply wonderful, yet my work, our work, is far from done. Challenging social issues continue to plague our community including child abuse and neglect, runaway youth, substance abuse, hunger, senior services and homelessness. I believe that we all have an obligation to pay it forward, giving back to those less fortunate. Together, we can make a difference one woman, one man, one family, one child at a time.

Matrix serves more than 10,000 consumers a year through a comprehensive network of programs and services. With your support, we envision this number increasing as we wipe out this disease of poverty gripping our city.

Thank you to the Matrix Human Services Board of Directors, supporters, volunteers and staff for your commitment to serve. I look forward to working together to create future milestones for this unique organization founded 105 years ago by a group of dedicated women known as the League of Catholic Women.

Yours in Service,

Marcella Wilson, Ph.D.
President and CEO
My first year as Board Chair for Matrix Human Services has been a whirlwind. Having the pleasure to be involved with the agency as a board and committee member for nine years, I thought I understood what Matrix was all about. This year, my eyes and more importantly my heart have been opened to the incredible level of need in our community, the near overwhelming complexity of the work that is required and the amazing and life-changing services that this wonderful agency provides.

In addition to providing the all important core services of our programs, this year Matrix successfully completed a critical re-accreditation process, launched a comprehensive giving campaign and continued to spread the word about the “Transition to Success” (TTS) model that is at the heart of the agency’s mission. In addition to celebrating 105 years of service, we are also celebrating an important milestone in our agency leadership with Dr. Marcella Wilson entering her fifth year as President and Chief Executive Officer. Dr. Wilson has provided stable leadership during turbulent economic times. More notably, she has brought clarity to the agency’s vision and forged new alliances that will help the organization to continue succeeding in the future.

While much has been accomplished, there is still much more to do. For me, listening to client stories of breakthroughs and seeing faces filled with gratitude are the most important reminders of the great work that Matrix has done.

On behalf of the Matrix Board of Directors, I’d like to thank all of you that have supported the agency over the past year. We look forward to continuing to work together to break the cycle of poverty.

The Matrix Human Services Connect Your Community (CYC) program serves Osborn neighborhood citizens by providing training that develops computer skills from literacy to advanced applications, preparing citizens to compete in today’s economy. At the same time, broadband’s benefits help the region advance both socially and economically.

This program is unique in each community but consistent in its goal to engage, train, equip and support citizens to transform them from computer beginners to broadband-empowered individuals. CYC is funded through a two-year grant of $18.7 million from the U.S. Department of Commerce’s Broadband Technology Opportunities Program.

Matrix Human Services Center is a comprehensive human service and community center offering programs and services designed to meet the social, physical and educational needs of Northeast Detroit residents. Programs include adult education/literacy, music & art instruction, fatherhood programs, employment services, computer skill building, Head Start classes, counseling, community activities and family programs.

To meet the needs of the Osborn community, Matrix has pioneered the shared programming and collaboration services model. Research has shown that by housing various social services agencies and programs within one building, community residents enjoy improved access to the services they need. Programs in multi-service centers benefit from the increased visibility, lower overhead costs and expanded resources.

The Matrix Human Services Center (The Center) is utilized by one hundred and twenty eight (128) organizations and groups. The Center encompasses a collaborative network of programs, events and services designed to meet the social, physical, spiritual and education needs of Detroit residents. The Center is open seven days a week, serving thousands of residents weekly. Through its extensive outreach program, including the publication of the quarterly Osborn Voice newsletter, The Center reaches more then 30,000 households in Detroit.

Matrix continues to make major improvements to The Center’s infrastructure and grounds. In 2008, the Kresge Foundation donated $300,000 for the installation of a new HVAC system. This new system has been a contributing factor in the expansion of The Center’s summer programs with the addition of a central air conditioning system. A building plan for the Center is being completed with funds provided by United Way of Southeastern Michigan and in-kind services given by the Smith Group.

In 2011, two unused houses on the grounds of The Center will be demolished using funds donated by the Ford Foundation.

Off The Streets is Detroit’s only voluntary, licensed, community-based, short-term emergency shelter (21 day) program for youth. Services are available to both males and females between the ages of 12 and 17 years old who are runaway, potential runaway, homeless and “throwaway” youth. In 2010, OTS launched a pilot Street Outreach Program (SOP) serving youth in the City of Detroit and Wayne County. OTS also has a Transitional Living Program (TLP) that provides residential and non-residential services to youth between 16 and under-21 years old for up to 540 days.
All services are provided by trained professional staff at no cost to the youth or their families. The problem with runaway and homeless youth in the City of Detroit and Wayne County continues to be one with frightening and unimaginable consequences.

- Young people on the street and homeless, become victimized and vulnerable to danger with consequences that could be detrimental to a young life.
- Increasing numbers of youth are “throwaways” without permanent housing.
- Many young people are forced from their homes due to family conflict, substance abuse and/or socioeconomic hardship.

While providing youth with a safe alternative to life “on the streets,” OTS seeks to reunite youth with their families whenever possible. Emphasis is placed on parental participation and family counseling to divert and prevent youth from becoming chronic runaways, homeless and/or entering the juvenile justice system. The OTS TLP supports older youth with life skills, housing and other resources to ensure that they have a healthy and productive adulthood.

OTS offers street outreach, community education and prevention-related services, including providing in home/off-site counseling with families and youth to stabilize situations that cause youth to run. Aftercare services are also provided to families when youth return home to ensure the youth remains home. OTS also provides workshops in schools and other community centers.

As a youth serving agency, OTS advocates for the humanistic delivery of quality services to youth and their families within the community.

Off The Streets is funded by the State of Michigan Department of Human Services, United Way Blended Funding Initiative, the City of Detroit Emergency Shelter Grant and the United States Department of Agriculture.

Shelter from the Storm

By Trina Mannino, HOUR Detroit, March 2010

According to the Michigan Coalition Against Homelessness, one in three homeless people in Michigan is a child. Nationally, teen homelessness rose to 761,000 in 2008 from 550,000 in 2002, The New York Times reported.

Recent surveys have attributed part of the surge in homeless youth to the weak economy. “What I think that is happening is they [teens] are feeling the stress in their home,” says Celia Thomas, Vice President of Matrix Human Services, Barat Child and Family Services Division, which includes the Off The Streets Program in Detroit. “Sometimes, the whole family becomes homeless and the teenager is the hardest one to place.”

Adolescents in a homeless family can slip between the cracks and can’t stay with the family for a number of reasons. Shelters lack space, for one thing and cruel as it seems, friends and family don’t want to take on the anticipated burden of housing a teen.

“When we have taken in young people, they have told us stories like sleeping in cars, sleeping in empty houses that have been abandoned or burned out,” Thomas says. “We’ve had situations in which teens have reported that they were in flophouses forced into prostitution.”

It’s difficult to believe that young people experience situations that even most adults don’t see, but it’s a grim reality for 17-year-old Kiera Ervan of Detroit. Ervan left home at 16 because of friction with her stepfather and lack of support from her mother. For more than a year, she bounced from place to place, staying with friends and acquaintances. The teenager also tried to continue high school while being homeless, but eventually dropped out. “I couldn’t focus at school while I was thinking about where I was going to lay my head at each night,” she says.

Finally, on one fateful day in January, she had enough. “I couldn’t keep doing it anymore. I was at my breaking point,” Ervan says. “I’m 17. It’s not too late for me. I have to do something.” Through a social worker, Ervan was admitted into the Off The Streets program. “I keep praying to God, to keep steering me the right way. I feel like I’m accomplishing something by being here [the Off The Streets Program],” she said in January, although — as with many teens — whether she would stay was uncertain.

In 2009, Off The Streets emergency shelter housed 147 youths. The program aids teens from 13 to 17 who ran away, are homeless, or are in danger of becoming homeless.

Off The Streets has made a significant impact on those lucky enough to be admitted. Jason Graves is one such young person. A year ago, the 18-year-old Detroiter came to the program after leaving home because of family issues; he was feeling the pressure of his family’s economic woes. Today, with the support of the Off The Streets staff, Graves is enrolled in his last year of high school and planning to attend culinary school after graduation.

Despite the additional problems homeless youths have, Thomas reminds the community that they still are like any other teenagers struggling with the transition from childhood to adulthood.

“It’s not a new story for a young person to have difficulty. Adolescence is difficult,” Thomas says. “But economic times like this, and all the factors that come along with it, make adolescence that much more challenging.”
He is 15 years old in ninth grade, attending Hamtramck High School. Prior to entering the program, Jelani was having difficulty in keeping his grade above a 2.0, was involved in substance abuse, and was caught by the police for invading a vacant house in his neighborhood. Mr. Page has been in the program for almost three months and has participated in tutoring and group and individual counseling sessions.

During his three month stay, Jelani has made much progress in pulling himself out of destructive behavior. With his successful exit and discharge from the Youth Assistance Program around the corner, we are all proud to have witnessed Jelani’s improvement. He has been receiving very well above a 2.0 grade point average and has reduced his incorrigible behavior at home and at school, despite many obstacles along the way, including the loss of one of his closest friends, who was also his cousin, killed in a drive by shooting only one month ago.

Jelani has expressed his need to avoid the destructive behavior that led to his cousin’s death. He has stated on numerous occasions that his passion is to enroll in a good college and pursue a career in which his athletic abilities and skills are recognized. He would also like to follow the path of education. During our last parent conference, Jelani’s mother expressed being thrilled with Jelani’s improvement at home and at school. He has gained insight about himself, the world around him, and has discovered what he needs to do in order to have a bright future.

Amari, a 15 year old young adult, entered into the Youth Assistance Program on January 3, 2011 due to retail fraud. She was diverted from the court system and was allowed to complete the three month program and have the charges removed from her police record. However, Amari was having other difficulties and stresses at the time of her charge. Besides recently having a baby, she reported being suspended from school a few times for dress code violations and was desperately trying to recover high school credits for classes she had failed in the past.

While Amari and her parent stated that she did not have any behavioral issues or issues at home, Amari was having difficulty navigating her life and trying to complete high school while being a parent. Amari participated in group counseling and tutoring sessions while in the program. While in group counseling Amari began to learn about and understand the importance of life skills such as setting goals and objectives and implementing positive coping strategies into her life. Amari's parent explained how the program helped them communicate more and Amari stated that she enjoyed being apart of a group of peers her age. During tutoring Amari demonstrated how important is was to her to make something of herself because of her son. She understood that the mistakes she made were fixable and Amari started to study for her G.E.D. Although successfully discharged from the Youth Assistance Program, she still continues to work towards her G.E.D. today and make a better life for herself.
